Introducing the EMR ASM Alliance

The Eastern Metropolitan Region (EMR) Active Service Model Alliance promotes strong partnerships to implement an ASM approach.

The Alliance brings together the expertise, knowledge and experience of individuals and agencies from right the EMR.

The Alliance has evolved from the EMR Assessment Alliance - the change in name is reflective of the transition to the ASM approach and the emphasis of the group's work supporting all agencies to embed the ASM principles.

The structure of the Alliance encourages the involvement of senior management, program leaders, clinicians and program staff across the breadth of HACC agencies and key stakeholders in the region.

An Executive Group oversees the strategic direction of the Alliance.

Two working groups, formed in late 2010, are responsible for putting into operation the Alliance's vision.

All members of the Alliance are asked to actively share information about the Alliance's activities with their organisations' and service delivery partners.

See page 2 for more information on the structure of the Alliance

Through the Alliance, agencies work together to achieve client-centered and holistic care

The Principles of the Active Service Model

- ✓ People want to remain autonomous
- ✓ People have the potential to improve their capacity
- ✓ People should be viewed in a holistic way
- ✓ HACC services should be organised around the person and the carer, the person should not be slotted into existing services
- ✓ A person's needs are best met where there are strong partnerships and collaborative working relationships between the person, their carers and family, support workers and between service providers
